

Tyler's Own Z-Coil Rated 5th in the Nation

Z-Coil® Pain Relief Footwear™ owners Bill and Ann Orr were among 5 other stores in the nation to win an all-expenses-paid trip to South Korea. The trip was paid for by corporate Z-Coil in Albuquerque, New Mexico. Along with the other store owners, the Orrs visited the company's 5 overseas factories. Ann says that she was impressed by the workers' precision, and the expertise involved in producing the Z-Coil® shoe.

The Orrs opened their store at 3358 SSW Loop 323 on March 8, 2003. Ann says they opened their store out of "pain necessity." Old injuries had forced Ann to begin using a 2-wheel electric scooter, but after only 3 days of wearing Z-Coil® footwear, Ann says the old pains began to subside. Her husband Bill was ready for retirement, but when he saw his wife's nearly instant recovery, Bill decided he had to spread the good news to other people living with physical discomfort.

Bill attended an intense training seminar at Z-Coil® in Albuquerque in order to learn how to make adjustments to the shoes. After his training, Bill was equipped to make each shoe a custom fit for its buyer. Each shoe has a Z-Orthotic™ (a piece that cradles the foot), a permanent flex line at the ball of the foot, and a conical steel coil that greatly reduces the rate of impact absorbed at heel-strike. A U.S. Department of Energy study shows that the coil in Z-Coil® footwear absorbs 50% more impact from walking or running than conventional shoes. Plus, the coil returns more energy back into the person wearing the shoes.

A competitive runner and father of 8, Alvara Gallegos created the footwear in an effort to relieve his own lower back pain. The shoes also offer relief from arthritis, plantar fasciitis, heel spurs, sciatica, herniated disks, knee and ankle injuries, and an array of other ailments. Since opening their store in 2003, the Orrs have remained steadfast in their mission to provide pain-free movement to their customers. Their dedication has led to their own personal success, as well as pain-free living for people around the area.
